

ScholarSphere is an easy-to-use repository service that lets you collect, preserve, and share your research and scholarly work with the Penn State community and the world.

Why use ScholarSphere?

To enhance your academic and professional online presence

Use stable URLs to cite your academic work on your résumé and professional networking sites.

To share your work with prospective employers and graduate schools

Provide open access to your content—with ScholarSphere's adjustable privacy settings you decide when and if to share your materials.

To associate your work with Penn State even after you graduate

Preserve data in any media format—data sets, papers, image collections, and more—from any academic discipline.

Who is using ScholarSphere?

Monique Bastidas
graduate student in chemistry

Hester Blum
associate professor of English

Scott Showalter
assistant professor of chemistry

"Having all of your work in one place associated with Penn State lends weight to the materials you're sharing."

—Christopher Long, professor and associate dean, College of the Liberal Arts

Get Started Today > scholarsphere.psu.edu

A service of the University Libraries and Penn State IT.